

DELHI, INDIA

THE PROBLEM FORCED LABOR SLAVERY

India's capital city is the hub for politics and progress. IJM is uniquely positioned to combat forced labor slavery: In just three years, we helped rescue more than 3,700 people in 12 of India's 29 states.

IJM's Delhi-based team trains other NGOs on our collaborative casework model and partners with four organizations to rescue and rehabilitate forced labor slaves. We also partner with like-minded organizations to run a national advocacy campaign aimed at strengthening India's laws against slavery and increasing awareness so the public demands an end to this crime.

How IJM Delhi Combats Forced Labor Slavery

We rescue children and families by partnering with other organizations fighting slavery throughout India. We train and provide direct support as these partners help authorities rescue forced labor slaves. Our impact has multiplied through this network of partners: We've assisted with rescue operations in 12 of India's 29 states.

We bring criminals to justice. Traffickers and owners who use forced labor slavery to run their business must be restrained to stop the cycle of violence. We will collaborate with our partners to support public prosecutors seeking justice in local courts.

We restore survivors by helping partner organizations develop individualized care plans for each family and their community. IJM social workers equip our partners with training and tools they need to respond to trauma, provide one-on-one counseling, and facilitate group meetings that will enable survivors to thrive in freedom. We help adults pursue dignifying jobs and ensure children can enroll in school.

We strengthen justice systems by training and mentoring law enforcement, government officials and non-profit organizations. Our partner organizations regularly conduct rescue operations without needing our direct assistance, and they are training new partners in new regions. We also lead IJM's national advocacy efforts to strengthen laws against slavery and raise awareness through media and social outreach.

IJM DELHI OPENS

2013

INDIA'S FIRST HELP-LINE

IJM helped district officials issue their first release certificates formally emancipating 5 people from forced labor slavery. The media and local courts took notice, and soon the state launched the nation's first toll-free help-line for victims of forced labor.

2013

BIGGEST RESCUE OPERATION

179 people rescued from an oppressive brick factory in India's newest state—one of IJM's largest operations ever.

2014

HEADLINE NEWS

A woman who voted for the first time after decades in slavery was featured in a front-page article in one of India's leading newspapers— finally making forced labor slavery headline news.

DIRECTOR OF OPERATIONS ANU GEORGE

Anu joined IJM in 2011 to lead the Chennai legal team, before transitioning to the Delhi-based partnership project that has equipped NGOs across India to combat labor trafficking and rehabilitate survivors. A decorated lawyer, professor and thinker, Anu has an unbounding energy and a deep compassion for victims of violence. She inspires people to think big and believe that slavery in India will end soon.
