Violence is an everyday threat to the poor. It’s as much a part of daily life as hunger, disease or homelessness.

Established laws are rarely enforced in the developing world—so criminals continue to rape, enslave, traffic and abuse the poor without fear.

At International Justice Mission, we believe everyone deserves to be safe. Our global team has spent more than 20 years on the front lines fighting some of the worst forms of violence, and we’re proving our model works.

IJM partners with local authorities to rescue victims of violence, bring criminals to justice, restore survivors, and strengthen justice systems.

OUR CASEWORK

- Sex Trafficking
  Children and young women are forced into the sex industry, whether online, in brothels or in private homes.

- Forced Labor Slavery
  Millions of children and families are held as slaves in abusive and often violent conditions.

- Sexual Violence Against Children
  Girls and boys are vulnerable at school, at home or in their communities.

- Violence Against Women and Children
  Sexual violence, intimate partner violence, femicide and other violent crimes.

- Police Abuse of Power
  Corrupt officers violently abuse the poor and throw the innocent in jail.

- Citizenship Rights Abuse
  Minority families in Thailand are denied legal rights, leaving them...
Our Model: Justice System Transformation

We help victims of violence secure justice, and we partner with key authorities in the justice system to fix what is broken. We do this in four ways:

- Rescue
  Working with local police to rescue victims from ongoing violence and bring them to safety.

- Restore
  Working with social workers to restore survivors to their community through counseling, education and skills training.

- Restrain
  Working with local police to restrain criminals, traffickers and slave owners from hurting others.

- Repair
  Working to address gaps in the systems that will protect the poor from violence long-term.
