AULLIDO FILM DISCUSSION GUIDE

SPEAKING UP AGAINST INJUSTICE

FILM DESCRIPTION

There's a violent secret under the surface in Guatemala City. It affects families in every social class and in every neighborhood. Everyone knows it but everyone is silent. Yet for Vicente, a teenager who dreams of playing professional soccer someday, sexual violence in the form of a soccer coach interrupts this dream. That's when Vicente decided to speak up for himself and others. This decision makes the difference from being a victim to being a hero.

Based on the true story behind a landmark legal case by the International Justice Mission (IJM), Aullido (Spanish for Howl) displays what can happen when youth are bold in the face of injustice and how those in power can stand on their behalf.

LEADERS GUIDE—AULLIDO

PREPARATION

PRE FILM SCREENING PREPARATION:

1. Because of the intense subject of sexual violence, it is required that you watch the film in its entirety before showing it to your students. Even though no violence is seen as part of the film, it is obvious sexual violence is taking place behind closed doors.
2. Most youth leaders have found this film to be appropriate for high school students and older. We strongly recommend having several parents view the film before showing to middle school age students.
3. If your church or schools requires parental permission prior to showing films of this subject matter, make sure you take the necessary steps as required.
4. It is possible that students from your group have experienced some degree of sexual assault in their lives. Watching this film might cause them to come forward to you or one of your adult leaders with this information. Please be prepared and aware of your church or school guidelines on approaching victims of child sexual assault and ways to help them. See suggested resources at the end of this guild.
5. Discussion group size recommendation is one adult with five students. This allows for lots of conversation by everyone in the group. However, sometimes this ideal is not possible, so a one to ten ratio can work, but will reduce the amount of individual participation. Recruit other adults as discussion leaders as needed if your ratios is beyond 1 to 10.
6. Next steps options following the film: The best ways to make the showing of this film, more than simply another normal meeting for your youth group or school, is to have a tangible way that the group can get involved immediately. Listed below are options for you to consider.
 - a. Take an offering: This will allow students to immediately provide funds to help pay for those yet to be rescued from violence or provide resources and care for those already rescued. See what your offering can pay for at IJM.org/gifts
 - b. Launch a GiveChange fund raising campaign with your youth group. Download the free GiveChange toolkit for ideas for your group if needed. IJM.org/get-involved/youth
 - c. Launch promotion for the 24 Hour Justice Experience (24JE) event. Download the free 24JE manuals, videos, pictures and stories at IJM.org/24je
 - d. Launch the “Justice” theme for your small groups to study during the following five weeks using the “10 Minute Moments: Seeking Justice” devotional book. IJM.org/get-involved/youth
 - e. Challenge students to start a Justice Club on their school campus. Contact the Youth Mobilization department at 24je@IJM.org for a justice club toolkit.

SMALL GROUP DISCUSSION LEADER'S PREPARATION:

1. Gather the discussion leaders together a week or two prior to the film screening.
 - a. Watch the film together and talk through the various discussion question options.
 - b. Decide together which questions you will use, which need to be deleted or added based on your specific church or school setting.
2. Review your church or school guidelines should any students come forward with information about sexual abuse against themselves or others they know of.
3. Make sure each leader has copies of the discussion questions.

IJM GUATEMALA OVERVIEW AND WELCOME

International Justice Mission (IJM) protects the poor from violence by partnering with local authorities to:

We Rescue Children

We Restore Survivors

We Bring Criminals to Justice

We Strengthen Justice Systems

THE PROBLEM: SEXUAL VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN

Despite the beauty of Guatemala, there is a hidden plague of sexual violence against children. In some neighborhoods, 1 in 4 adolescent girls is a victim of sexual violence.

Many of the children we serve are from “red zones.” Governments designate these areas as particularly dangerous because they are prone to natural disaster—but in this case, they are colored red because of extreme violence. When IJM began exploring opening an office in 2005, human rights experts said the system was too broken and would never protect the poor. Nearly a decade later, a stronger law and a new Sex Crimes Unit exist, evidence of a country getting serious about tackling the crime.

THE FACTS:

- An estimated 1 in 5 women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. (UN)
- For many poor girls, school is the most common place where sexual violence occurs—and the fear of violence is a common reason girl’s leave school. (World Health Organization)
- In Guatemala, private security forces outnumber public police 7 to 15. (Global Post)

HOW IJM GUATEMALA COMBATS SEXUAL VIOLENCE

1. We rescue children out of dangerous situations of sexual violence by working with government authorities. We receive case referrals from the courts, public prosecutors, other NGOs, the department of social services, churches and families. We ensure that every child is brought to a place of safety.
2. We bring criminals to justice. IJM investigators help police develop and track down leads to find and arrest the suspect. This can sometimes take months or even years, but it likely wouldn’t happen at all if IJM was not involved. IJM lawyers represent survivors in court or work with prosecutors to build a strong case, and we help survivors who choose to share the truth in court prepare for their testimony.
3. We restore survivors by providing consistent support to the child and the family so she or he can heal in a safe and stable environment. IJM social workers and psychologists develop treatment plans for each survivor concentrating on physical health, trauma-focused counseling, personal security, and education or economic self-sufficiency.
4. We strengthen justice systems by equipping prosecutors, judges and police respond to sex crimes against children and treat the victims with sensitivity. In a five-year review of court files, IJM discovered that only 3 out of every 10 cases received a full investigation. The current System Reform project began in 2014 and will train the Guatemalan National Police and the Sex Crimes Unit to effectively investigate cases so trials can actually occur.

SEXUAL ABUSE RESOURCES

Here are a few suggested resources to guide you with students who experienced sexually abuse. This list is not exhaustive by any means. Be sure to connect with the recommended counselors at your church, school and police department for additional resources.

1. Child Protective Services (CPS): Offices within local communities are responsible for receiving and investigating reports of suspected child abuse and neglect. Reports are received by Child Protective Services (CPS) located in each community office and assessed to determine whether the report meets the legal definition of abuse or neglect and how dangerous the situation is. Contact your local police station for the contact number in your area.

ABOUT THE FILM

The Auilldo film was created in partnership between IJM and CIY* as a tool to help youth groups, schools and churches take action against injustice happening in their own communities and around the world. It was first shown to the 35,000 students who attending the CIY MOVE events during the summer of 2015. The story of Vicente is true and based on a landmark case where IJM represented Vicente’s family. Because of the complexity of the case and to protect the family, some aspects of the story were modified and/or left out.

Auilldo was then entered into several Film Festivals across the country and won Best Short Film at the 2015 Justice Film Festival in Chicago.

The CIY Engage Missions trips to Washington DC, Cambodia and the Dominican Republic all participate with IJM offices and partners as part of these trips. IJM encourages you to check them out at www.CIY.com
